Safety Information

The responsibility for violence prevention rests with those who use violence. Being subjected to violence is never your fault. We encourage anyone who has experienced violence to seek support using the above resources. The following information is provided to help you and your community stay safe:

- Remember that being placed in an unsafe situation is not your fault. You did not do anything wrong. It is the person who engaged in the behavior that is to blame.
- You are not obligated to do anything you don't want to do. A person's boundaries should always be honored. It is not your fault if another person disregards your wishes.
- If you observe behaviors that are making others uncomfortable, you have an opportunity to be an active bystander. To learn more about bystander intervention training visit <https://wellbeing.jhu.edu/HealthPromotion/programs-and-training/>
